of the phorbol ester TPA for the induction of acquired immunological tolerance. Administration of diabetogenic or autoimmune antiserum to neonatal mice can prevent development of experimental autoimmune disease. The conditions for induction of this state of unresponsiveness to the antiserum are mild, and the inhibitor factor or factors are unstable in in vitro assays. In this study, the phorbol ester

12-O-tetradecanoylphorbol-13-acetate (TPA) was found to induce tolerance to neonatally administered antiserum. Mice that received TPA with antiserum at the time of birth were not sensitized to the antiserum and produced only low levels of antiserum when challenged with the same antigen at birth. In contrast, mice given antiserum and TPA at 4 days of age were sensitized to the antiserum, and produced high levels of antiserum upon challenge at 4 days. These findings extend our understanding of the cellular mechanisms involved in the induction of tolerance to auto-antigens. I've been looking for a size-wonder for a while now. I've tried SACHI, W, E, and XS under the Dressin Mart dress size 34-36. I think I may just have to settle for S, I have a feeling it may be a bit too short but maybe I can style it around.
